Grant Activity

Course

Focus: varies by Visitor's interests and department initiatives

Type: Normally seminar; sometimes lectures

Level: Normally undergraduate; Law is only graduate level

Teaching load: 3 hours per week

Average class size: 7-20 students

Syllabus is required. Course description and title required by mid-August 2020 along with provisional syllabus. Final syllabus or detailed book list required by mid-November 2020.

The syllabus needs to be quite detailed, listing the focus of each class session and the reading / requirements for each class. It should also list clear course objectives / learning goals, so that the students (and professor) have a clear sense of what the course aims to accomplish. Students need detailed syllabi in order to plan ahead and juggle their obligations for five courses taken simultaneously.

Additional grant activities and duties

Teaching and student advising; regular office hours are important.

Opportunities offered to the scholar

Opportunities for research and collaboration with peers

Opportunities for teaching or guest lecturing at other departments and other institutions in the city of affiliation of the scholar

Introduction and interaction with the local and university community

The Center for Italian Studies (and other related institutes at Notre Dame, including the Medieval Institute and the Nanovic Institute for European Studies, among others) afford immense opportunities for engaging other faculty and finding common research interests. Italian Studies (see Italian Studies at Notre Dame) draws together about 30 faculty members, and sponsors regular academic lectures and events. The institutes have very active lecture and conference schedules, and sponsor research and initiatives; the Medieval Institute also has a wonderful, highly accessible library, a focal point for more than 60 medievalists on campus.

University Resources and Facilities:

Library facilities

Office space

Personal computer

Access to computer network and other IT resources

Access to university canteen: pay per use

Facilitated access to other on campus resources (sports and cultural facilities such as theatre, concerts, language courses, etc.), faculty pricing for performing arts center and certain sports

An on-campus wellness center / clinic is available to all ND employees. TO BE CONFIRMED.

Housing:

The University will pay the Scholar's housing expenses for on-campus housing for up to four family members. If the Scholar chooses to reside off-campus or if on-campus housing is not available, the University will provide reimbursement up to the cost of the on-campus housing. The housing will be provided only for the duration of the one semester during the Scholar's teaching. If, due to the Scholar's family size or the unavailability of on-campus housing, the Scholar shall pay any amount over the on-campus housing cost.
